

The robe is made of beaten gold and weighs fifty pounds. The crown is encrusted with precious stones. This crown will probably become the crown of Greece.

Some day when the era of universal peace has dawned, and when diplomacy will be studied as a thing of the past, like witchcraft and sorcery, the staffs of the Quai d'Orsay will compose novels and write books, plays and novels.

Some of them are already beginning to show their talents. One of these is Fernand Gavary, minister plenipotentiary and director of administrative and technical affairs. He published a most little stunner of one act plays of a diplomatic savant. One is called "The Ultimatum." Another is called "A Grave Accident," which reminds one of a grave incident; and a third is "Hide and Seek," a game of hide and seek.

The surprise, however, created no sensation and the experts are not discussing whether this extension of United States Steel Corporation Product Export company's business really does make sense. The answer is that because of the unusually great demand of the markets all over the world, the company is practicing what it preaches, and it is pointed out that while the exports of the American steel trust in 1931 were valued at $200,000,000, the turnover of the German steel mills in the same year reached a total of about $200,000,000.

Summing up the situation, the German experts estimate that the German iron and steel industry for years to come has nothing to fear from American competition. The large profits that the American steel trust, the geographical location of whose plants is shown in the map, and those of the German competitors,

Special Cable to The Tribune.
PORT SAID, June 7.—Leaving one wife in England, a second in India, and children by another woman in Malta, an Indian merchant of Port Said, who died recently, has bequeathed the bulk of his fortune to endow a girls' school in his native town.

By these new press tactics two things are accomplished: The leaders, who first kindled the fires of passion by their incendiary speeches, are relieved of any responsibility in case the worst should happen. They will no longer be in danger of an indictment for high treason, and at the same time the English voters are told that the "Loyalists" of Ulster are as determined to resist force by force as the "rebels."

Among statesmen who are in favor of home rule for Ireland there is no doubt that before long the arrangements for the execution of the sentence on their leaders is dictated by mere cowardice; that they are now doing everything to save themselves from responsibility; that, if the Government of Ulster is reorganized, it will not be very safe for either Sir Carson or the noble Marquis of Londonderry to show their heads in a public place in Ulster, and at least Irish enough not to enjoy playing the parts of dupes.

By these new press tactics two things are accomplished: The leaders, who first kindled the fires of passion by their incendiary speeches, are relieved of any responsibility in case the worst should happen. They will no longer be in danger of an indictment for high treason, and at the same time the English voters are told that the "Loyalists" of Ulster are as determined to resist force by force as the "rebels."

Among statesmen who are in favor of home rule for Ireland there is no doubt that before long the arrangements for the execution of the sentence on their leaders is dictated by mere cowardice; that they are now doing everything to save themselves from responsibility; that, if the Government of Ulster is reorganized, it will not be very safe for either Sir Carson or the noble Marquis of Londonderry to show their heads in a public place in Ulster, and at least Irish enough not to enjoy playing the parts of dupes.

Special Cable to The Tribune.—PARIS, June 7.—Admiral Boue de Lapevriere, commander-in-chief of the First French fleet, has declared that the French fleet will be in a form to perform exhaustive test both of the crews and of the material, and will afford much information on the maximum measure of speed which can be performed both by the officers and crews.

The admirals will be allowed complete freedom of action if necessary the ships will be driven at the highest possible speed they are capable of developing.

Squadron commanders will act on their own initiative. Strict war routine will be observed, and ships will navigate with lights out at night.